

Management

Climb Asia is a group of professional rock climbers. Since its inception in 2002, Climb Asia has been committed to develop the sport and seek new grounds in Singapore and the region. Unlike other companies in this business, we at Climb Asia are professional climbers who not only actively use climbing walls but also own a climbing training facility at 60 Tessensohn Road . So rest assured that we know best, the needs of the end-user as well as the facilities manager.

Mohammed Halil Bin Ngah. Captained the National Speed climbing squad in the Singapore Climbing World Cup 2002, and has been climbing actively and progressively since 1994. Inspired by the quality of the rock climbing he had on his first trip to Thailand, he got hooked to the sport and have since travelled far and wide climbing in some of the best crags in the world and competed against some of the world's best climbers in the World Cup circuit. After being ranked Number 1 in Singapore for 5 years and spending sometime in the top three of regional competitions (Silver in Asia Cup 2001, bronze in the Asian X Games 2002 and 2003), he decided to give something back to the community.

Ivan Toh started climbing in 2001 and immediately fell in love with the 'raw' feel of the sport. Inspired by the challenge it provided for his mind and the lessons it taught about commitment, trust and fears; he quickly got himself certified as a National Routesetter so he could share his brand of problem-solving and the resulting satisfaction with others. He believes the beauty of the sport is in its simplicity and his passion for climbing continues to drive him onward to bring the sport to the uninitiated.

Lim June Pein got hooked on climbing as a student, and has since then devoted his time and energies to trying his hands at everything the sport encompasses; from club leaderships and event management, to coaching and competitive climbing. In between sharing this lifestyle sport with everyone and anyone, he hopes to visit the world's greatest climbing spots, and to inspire others to discover for themselves, the life lessons that climbing has taught him

Bi Yu aka "Fish" (Program Coordinator)

Mohd Irwan (Operations Manager) was introduced to rock climbing in 2004. His passion drove him to train harder and participated in numerous competitions, locally as well as representing Singapore internationally in World Cup. He believes that climbing is not only a sport, but also nature's pathway for each and everyone of us to exploit our limits. Enjoying every climb he has attempted as a puzzle, requiring good planning and determination; he wishes to share the same skills he has picked up with the community at large. His infectious and boundless enthusiasm is testament to his mantra: "born to climb";.

Michael Lim (Retail Manager) is the newest addition to the Climb Asia team. He enrolled in the University of Climbing since 2003 and does not intend to quit school, ever. He is a fan of sport climbing and is passionate about his gear, and the local climbing community. He firmly believes in getting his hands dirty, and putting them to good use. Most importantly, (ladies, please take note) he is the Shop Guy. Yes, he is our Retail Manager and discounts and sales will sprout off him like lalang after the rain, if you treat him nicely. So catch him up at the shop armed with some coffee, stories and a good laugh. Hurry! While stocks last!
